As it is an open network accessible to anyone, the Internet does not offer a secure environment. Even though the packages of data are in principle transmitted through an encrypted form, this procedure does not apply to the envoyee or the recipient. Furthermore, even if the envoyee and the recipient are Suisse residents, the data may transfer via foreign countries that have less efficient data protection standards than Switzerland. Therefore, NEPSA cannot be held liable for the security of data transferred though the internet.
